Catalonia declares independence from Spain

Yesterday, in Barcelona, the Catalanian parliament declared independence from Spain. They did so, just before the Spanish government enacted article 155 against them.

The Spanish government immediately dissolved the Catalan parliament and called a snap election. Madrid then imposed direct rule on the newly self-declared 'independent' country.

Last night, following the declaration of independence in the Catalanian parliament, the people of Barcelona and Catalonia celebrated, though not all of its citizens agree with the new situation.

Spanish Prime Minister Mariano Rajoy announced new elections would take place in Catalonia on December 21, with Catalonia's police chief sacked and central government ministries assuming the powers of the Catalan administration until then. Spain is now in a major crisis.

Former UKIP leader Nigel Farage said, "It is Jean-Claude Juncker's worst nightmare." He added, "It makes Brexit look like a Sunday afternoon picnic."

Mr Juncker yesterday said there were now "more cracks" appearing in the union after Catalonia declared itself independent. He added, "I do not want a situation where, tomorrow, the European Union is made up of 95 different states."

Donald Tusk from the EU, said on Twitter, "For EU nothing changes. Spain remains our only interlocutor. I hope the Spanish government favours force of argument, not argument of force." It is an important and fair point.

EU governments have been quick to support Spain, saying they do not and will not recognise Catalonia's declaration of independence.

SPEAKING - DISCUSSION 1

Had the Spanish government allowed the people of Catalonia a proper legal vote, none of what is now happening might have happened. Spain is running scared of the situation, as is the EU, who are terrified the EU will now start to fall apart.

SPEAKING - DISCUSSION 2

Prior to Catalonia splitting from Spain, my students reminded me that when Kosovo broke away from Serbia (outside the EU), Belgrade was bombed by the EU and NATO. They suggested that the EU might now bomb Madrid, as they don't see any difference in the situation, other than the Americans now have a secret huge airbase in Kosovo, which they didn't have before, and Kosovo's economy is now a basket case. Compare the Kosovo and Catalonia situation.

SPEAKING - DISCUSSION 3

What other regions in Europe might now possibly want to break away from the countries they are now a part of? (There are many such regions - Google it!)

SPEAKING - DISCUSSION 4

Former UKIP leader Nigel Farage said, "It is Jean-Claude Juncker's worst nightmare." He added, "It makes Brexit look like a Sunday afternoon picnic." Does it?

DISCUSSION

Student A questions

- 1) Will economic pressure defeat the separatists in Catalonia?
- 2) Will the civil service and police in Barcelona take orders from Madrid?
- 3) Could we see troops on the streets of Barcelona?
- 4) How united are Catalans in the push for independence?
- 5) How can Madrid impose authority on Catalonia?
- 6) What happens to FC Barcelona now?
- 7) How likely is it that Catalonia's leaders, like Carles Puigdemont, will be jailed?
- 8) Who makes the next move in the Catalonian situation?
- 9) Do you support Spain or Catalonia?
- 10) Is there still room for compromise between Spain and Catalonia?
