Traditional children’s characters being forgotten

Today, let’s talk about traditional children’s characters in books read by English children past and present. The classic books we were brought up with and whose characters we know are today being shunned by the latest generation, who prefer to play on their computer. In a recent survey of 500 seven to 14-year-olds conducted by Worcester University some surprising results were found. One in five British children thought that Long John Silver is a character from Peter Pan while the same proportion believes Aslan was a giraffe, researchers found.

Due to his reinvention as a popular film character, more than half of the children knew that Aslan of C.S. Lewis’s The Lion, the Witch and the Wardrobe was a lion, but others guessed that he was a giraffe or a bear. 17% believed the wardrobe was the gateway to The Secret Garden and eight per cent thought it led to Willy Wonka’s chocolate factory! Researchers found that classic characters like Jemima Puddle-duck and Pippi Longstocking could drift out of the nation’s consciousness, with only one in four children aware that either existed.

Surprisingly only half of the children questioned claimed to have heard of the boy wizard Harry Potter. (This I find rather surprising, as I thought everyone knew about Harry Potter)! In the survey Harry Potter was still slightly ahead of Robinson Crusoe (46%) and Alice in Wonderland (45%). When asked which books they had actually read there were promising signs for some of the most popular children’s stories, with Charlie and the Chocolate Factory (33%) Wind in the Willows (29%) and Winnie-the-Pooh (28%) among the favourites.

Yet classics like Anne of Green Gables (6%), The Merry Adventures of Robin Hood (6%) and Swallows and Amazons (9%) fared less strongly. Asked to name their favourite author, Roald Dahl topped the poll with a third of all votes followed by JK Rowling with 21%. Professor Jean Webb, who oversaw the survey: “Thankfully, to counteract this possible downturn in children experiencing the classics, there is still a very strong interest in our rich literary heritage.”

EXERCISES

1. Children’s books: Think of three children’s books. Go round the room swapping details with others.

2. Dictation: The teacher will read four to six lines of the article slowly and clearly. Students will write down what they hear. The teacher will repeat the passage slowly again. Self-correct your work from page one - filling in spaces and correcting mistakes. Be honest with yourself on the number of errors. Advise the teacher of your total number of errors. Less than five is very good. Ten is acceptable. Any more is room for improvement! More than twenty - you need to do some work!

3. Reading: The students should now read the article aloud, swapping readers every paragraph.

4. Vocabulary: Students should now look through the article and underline any vocabulary they do not know. Look in dictionaries. Discuss and help each other out. The teacher will go through and explain any unknown words or phrases.

5. The article: Students should look through the article with the teacher.
   a) What is the article about?
   b) What do you think about the article?

6. Traditional children’s characters: In pairs think of five other traditional children’s books you know of. Then add five children’s characters from these or other books not in the article. Write them below. Discuss together.

11. Let’s do ‘The Article Quiz’: Have the students quiz each other in pairs. They score a point for each correct answer and half a point each time they have to look at the article for help. See who can get the highest score!

   Student A
   1) What book did C.S. Lewis write?
   2) Name the university.
   3) What animal is Aslan?
   4) Who is Harry Potter?
   5) Who oversaw the survey?

   Student B
   1) One in five children thought...?
   2) How many children were surveyed?
   3) What age were the children surveyed?
   4) Name the authors.
   5) One in four children was aware of what?

12. Your top three favourite children’s books and authors: Think of your top three children’s books and their authors. Compare lists with your partner and discuss together.
